Lab 1

HTML5 for Beginning Beginners

Andrew Snyder-Spak

LearnToProgram.TV

We haven't gone over very much coding at this point, so we will start off slow with this first lab. For this lab, you must create your own website from scratch. Your website should simply include a sentence or two of text saying something like "Hi, my name is Andrew. Welcome to my new website!". Since we have not gone over much actual coding at this point, feel free to go back and copy the basic website structure from the first course video. Be sure to test your website out in the browser when you are finished to make sure your site looks like you thought it would. Your finished lab should look something like the screenshot below: